EARLY CIVILIZATIONS.

DATE FOR ACCESSION OF MENES,

FIRST KING OF EGYPT.

G. Wilkinson,	2691 B. C.	Lepsius,	3892 B. C.
Stuart Poole,	2717 B. C.	Bruzsch,	4400 B. C.
Bunsen, (later view)	3059 B. C.	Marriette and
Bunsen, (early view)	3623 B. C.	Lenormant	5004 B. C.

CAUSES OF THIS GREAT DIVERSITY.

The Egyptians "did not enter into computations of time;" "they were without the chronological idea;" save in a few instances, "chronology is upon the monuments almost non-existent. This is the unanimous confession of the Egyptologers.—Rawlinson.

"Chronology can not be elicited from them," the monuments.—Baron Bunsen.

"The greatest obstacle to the establishment of a regular Egytian chronology is the circumstance that the Egyptians themselves never had any chronology at all."—M. Mariette, Director of the Service of Conservation of the Antiquities of Egypt.

MANETHO, the Egyptian Historian, who wrote in the time Ptolemy Philadelphus, divided Egyptian history into three periods, viz: the Old Empire, the Middle Empire, and the New Empire; to which he assigned respectively eleven, six, and fourteen dynasties—thirty-one in all—and to each dynasty its list of kings with regnal years. All Egyptologers but one—M. Mariette—agree that these dynasties were, to a greater or less extent, contemporary, and the above table shows the diversity of view as to the extent to which contemporary dynasties are admitted.

EGYPT'S THREE EMPIRES.

ACCORDING TO RAWLINSON.

1. "OLD EMPIRE," (Native Dynasties) 2450? or 2250 to about 1750 B. C.
2. "MIDDLE EMPIRE," (the Hyksos or Shepherd period) 1750 to 1500 B. C.
3. "NEW EMPIRE," (Native Dynasties) 1500 to 332 B. C.

EXAGERATED CHRONOLOGIES.

"Exagerated chronologies are common to a large number of nations; but critical examination has (at any rate in all cases but one) demonstrated their fallacy; and the many myriads of years postulated for their past civilization and history by the Babylonians and Assyrians, the Hindoos, the Chinese, and others, have been shown to be pure fiction, utterly unworthy of belief." "Cuneiform scholars confidently place the beginning of Babylon about B. C. 2300, of Assyria about B. C. 1500. The best Arian scholars place the dawn of Iranic civilization about B. C. 1500, of Indic about B. C. 1200. Chinese investigators can find nothing solid or substantial in the past of the "Celestials" earlier than B. C. 781, or at the furthest, B. C. 1154."—Rawlinson.

JANUS FACED

"SANSCRIT" was the language of the Brahmins of India, spoken at the time of Solomon. It has been much studied of late years. Sir W^m Jones who published a translation of the poem Sakuntala, in 1183, discovered that a complete literature had been preserved in India, comprising the 4 "VEDAS" (sacred books) history, philosophy and poetry. Philologists have discovered an intimate connection between the Sanscrit, Persian, Greek Latin, Slavonic, Scandinavian and Celtic languages. MAX MULLER.
